PAINT A FLAG

Valencia, Spain, 2021

VERTIGO
— CONTEMPORARY —

The work of Santiago Castro Pulido unfolds in Terra Nullius as a pictorial and conceptual investigation into the flag as a sign of contemporary identity. In a world shaped by processes of globalization, the project addresses the erosion and indeterminacy of the flag as a collective emblem, calling into question its ability to sustain stable meanings or represent a shared sense of belonging.

At the core of this inquiry lies a critical hypothesis: that the political gesture of altering the flag—seeking singular or dissident forms of representation—may become a figuratively sterile act. In this context, actions such as creating, intervening, defacing, inscribing, or painting flags operate as identity experiments that reveal a persistent paradox: while ways of inhabiting the world grow more homogeneous, they also become increasingly unequal.

Through painting, gesture, and material intervention, Castro Pulido constructs a field of tension in which symbols are continuously displaced and reconfigured. His practice does not resolve these contradictions but rather intensifies them, opening a space for reflection on territory, belonging, and the unstable conditions of representing flags in the present.

SANTIAGO CASTRO PULIDO

TERRA NULLIUS

La obra de Santiago Castro Pulido se despliega en Terra Nullius como una investigación pictórica y conceptual en torno a la bandera como signo de identidad contemporáneo. En un mundo atravesado por procesos de globalización, el proyecto aborda la erosión y la indeterminación de la bandera como emblema colectivo, poniendo en cuestión su capacidad para sostener significados estables o representar una pertenencia común.

En el centro de esta investigación se sitúa una hipótesis crítica: el gesto político de alterar la bandera —en la búsqueda de formas singulares o disidentes de representación— puede devenir en un acto figuradamente estéril. En este contexto, acciones como crear, intervenir, violentar, inscribir o pintar banderas funcionan como experimentos identitarios que evidencian una paradoja persistente: mientras las formas de habitar el mundo se vuelven más homogéneas, también se tornan más desiguales.

A través de la pintura, el gesto y la intervención material, Castro Pulido configura un campo de tensión en el que los símbolos se desplazan y reconfiguran constantemente. Su práctica no resuelve estas contradicciones, sino que las intensifica, abriendo un espacio de reflexión sobre el territorio, la pertenencia y las condiciones inestables de la representación de las banderas en el presente.
